Hi

Yes agree re being consistent and if we start to drop our lines on confidence this could get picked up. We did recently amend to reflect that we have confidence that Horizon has not been the cause of any of the court cases raised by MPs, rather than using a more generic line.

Suggested changes:

A Post Office spokesperson said: "In order to complete a thorough investigation and ensure our subpostmasters have confidence in the Horizon computer system we agreed to, and fully support, this external review to examine the small number of individual cases raised by a number of MPs. The timings are a matter for the external reviewer. But we hope the investigation can be completed as soon as possible.

Do we need this!

We have absolute confidence that Horizon has not been the cause of any of the court cases raised by MPs and hope that the investigation can be completed as soon as possible."
