Steve

I am in Bracknell tomorrow can we discuss, I really don't want to supply all the KELs information and we need to build an argument as to why not.

Freeths have asked if it is possible to provide Jason Coyne with all of the KEL entries (current and historic). They have not yet provided an explanation as to why all of them are required (and we will be querying this) but it would be of assistance if you could clarify the technical limitations of extracting the KEL.

My current understanding is that the KEL is hosted on proprietary software so the entries would only be in a readable format if you have a copy of the software, otherwise it is necessary for screenshots / printouts of each entry to be provided by FJ. Further, each entry comprises of multiple tabs (i.e. 1 KEL entry may require 4 or 5 screenshots to be provided) so producing the screenshots is a labour intensive task.

Please could you confirm:

1. the above is correct and any other limitations you can foresee in providing the KEL to Jason Coyne;
2. an estimated time to produce screenshots of all KEL entries;
3. what software the KEL requires and who owns this software; and
4. whether it would be possible for either Freeths or Jason Coyne to obtain a copy of this software and the KEL to be transferred to them.

If it would be easier to discuss the above, please feel free to call.

Kind regards
Amy
