Thanks

Gareth you said "The Falkirk bug was first raised in the Castleton Civil case and was then picked up on for a number of subsequent Criminal cases even though it was irrelevant to those environments."

Apart from the Misra case, can you please give us names for the other "subsequent Criminal cases" he refers to (regardless of whether or not they were relevant in that case, or whether they proceeded to trial or conviction).

Jarnail,

Please see page 14 of the Misra statement I sent you earlier.

Also attached is the summary from Castleton which refers to the problem in point 23.

Regards

Gareth

Jarnail,

The bug that was discussed in both cases related to a problem found in Calendar Square Falkirk around 2004 as covered in my witness statement in response to it having been raised by the defence expert Prof McLachlan. He was aware of it as it had also been raised by Mr Castleton in his case in 2006. I don't know how Mr Castleton was aware of it.

Gareth

Lesley,

Attached is my final Witness Statement for the Misra case. This was heard in Guildford Crown court in October 2010 and concerned West Byfleet Post Office.

Page 14 covers my response to a problem that had been identified in an earlier case (that involving Lee Castleton who took POL to court for unfair dismissal which he lost).

Do you need me to dig out anything more on this? I think the key point is that the fact that Horizon did have bugs has been discussed in court and POL still won the case.

Gareth
