"The remark: "The patches are not being issued to anything older than Windows 10, and that means anybody on an older operating system is exposed" is rather significant."

Horizon (HNGX) is on Windows NT - its full of holes security wise and thats probably the reference. However - its also unconnected to the internet - its on its own private network in a "walled garden" so the point being made is irrelevant.

Mick will be sending out a note on Monday reference the recent Intel exploits.

This tweet by Ron Warmington could be of use or even significant. He is one of the two partners from Second Sight who will I expect be supporting Freeths? He hasn't tweeted me before that I've noticed.

(Rod - weren't they prevented from involving themselves in any related matters, ie., in the terms of the contract they had with us?)

Mark - was this picked up by our SM team? It's important that all Sparrow links are fed through to legal.
